

Columbus Day

2018

Celebrating VISION, EXCELLENCE, DISCOVERY

CACI honors the Great Discoverer, whose bold endeavor changed the map to include the New World. We also celebrate the 106th anniversary of the magnificent National Columbus Memorial in Washington, D.C. As a global innovator of solutions to advance national security and transform government, CACI appreciates the significance of this intrepid visionary.

CACI
EVER VIGILANT

INFORMATION DEPLOYED
SOLUTIONS ADVANCED
MISSIONS ACCOMPLISHED

www.caci.com

THE NATION'S CAPITAL
CELEBRATES
526 Years of Discovery

HONORING THE GREAT DISCOVERER_

Christopher Columbus

MONDAY, OCTOBER 8, 2018
THE COLUMBUS MEMORIAL
COLUMBUS PLAZA - UNION STATION
WASHINGTON, D.C.

SPONSORED BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS ASSOCIATION
IN COORDINATION WITH THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

CELEBRATING CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

THE SITE

In the years following the great 1892 quadricentennial (400th anniversary) celebration of the achievements and discoveries of Christopher Columbus, an effort was launched by the Knights of Columbus in the District of Columbia to establish a monument in the nation's capital to the great discoverer. At their urging, Congress passed a law mandating a memorial, appropriating $100,000 to cover costs. A commission was established composed of the secretaries of State and War, the chairmen of the House and Senate Committees on the Library of Congress, and the Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus. With the new Union Station completed in 1907, plans focused on putting the memorial in the plaza in front of this great edifice.

After a series of competitions, sculptor Lorado Z. Taft of Chicago was commissioned. His plan gave us what you see today: a monument of Georgia marble, a semi-circular fountain 66 feet by 44 feet, and in the center a pylon crowned with a globe supported by four eagles connected by a garland. A 15-foot statue of Columbus, facing the U. S. Capitol and wrapped in a medieval mantle, stands in front of the pylon in the bow of a ship with its prow extending into the upper basin of the fountain and terminating with a winged figurehead representing democracy. Flanking Columbus are two seated allegorical figures. To his left, representing the Old World, is a patriarchal figure resting his arms upon a shield and grasping a crumpled map, while to his right, representing the New World, is a pre-Columbian figure (American Indian) crouching behind his crude shield and reaching for an arrow. On the rear of the large pylon is a double medallion picturing the Spanish monarchs King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella. Set at the extremes of the axis of the balustrade are couchant lions. Three towering flagpoles rise behind the monument representing the historic ships of 1492, the Niña, the Pinta and the Santa Maria.

Classic-columned lampposts in front of Union Station feature replicas of ships on their cross-axis near the base mounts.

Daniel Burnham, who designed Union Station, had been the major coordinating architect of the 1892-1893 World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago. His work launched the "City Beautiful" movement, to transform major cities, especially our nation's capital, into a series of well-landscaped neo-classical places, expressing confidence in our Republic during the 1890 period. The Columbus Fountain and Taft's Columbus statue were influenced in part by Frederick MacMonnies' fountain at the World's Columbian Exhibition.

Dedication of the new memorial took place on June 8, 1912 in the presence of President Taft and was accompanied by an elaborate three-day celebration organized by the Knights of Columbus that brought a reported 47,000 Knights and their families and others to the capital—115,000 in all. The photo on our title page shows the monument in its gleaming whiteness immediately after the flags that had veiled it were parted by an electric signal from the Italian ambassador. The unveiling ceremonies were followed by a mammoth 3-mile-long parade, viewed by 300,000 people according to newspaper accounts.

TODAY'S CEREMONY

Throughout the years, fraternal, civic and cultural organizations provided leadership for an annual Columbus Day ceremony at the site. For some years now, in collaboration with the National Park Service, the ceremony has been organized each year by the National Christopher Columbus Association (NCCA), established in 1989 to plan the celebration in the Quincentenary and subsequent years. It brings in many attendees from other parts of the country each year. Appearances of the U.S. Military Honor Guard, the Marine Band, and the Knights of Columbus Color Corps add to the pageantry.

Reading of the annual presidential and mayoral proclamations, remarks by members of the diplomatic corps, the awarding of a national essay contest prize (sponsored by NIAF and NSDAR), reading of the essay by the winner, and wreath-laying by embassies and many national and local patriotic groups constitute the program, which is open to the public free of charge.

A Summary of the Marine Band's History

For more than two centuries, the United States Marine Band has been part of the events that have shaped our nation. As "The President's Own"; its omnipresent role has made it an important thread in the fabric of American life.

Established by an Act of Congress in 1798, the Marine Band is America's oldest continuously active professional musical organization. Its primary mission is unique-to provide music for the President of the United States and the Commandant of the Marine Corps. President John Adams invited the Marine Band to make its White House debut on New Year's Day, 1801, in the then-unfinished Executive Mansion.

It is believed in March of that year; the band performed for the inaugural of Thomas Jefferson and has performed for every Presidential inaugural since that time. In Jefferson, the band found its most visionary advocate and friend. An accomplished musician himself, Jefferson recognized the unique relationship between the band and the Chief Executive and is credited with giving the Marine Band the title, "The President's Own."

Whether performing for South Lawn arrival ceremonies, State Dinners, or receptions, Marine Band musicians appear at the White House more than 200 times each year. Each fall, the band travels through a region of the United States during its concert tour, a century-old tradition initiated by John Philip Sousa, the band's legendary 17th Director.

As Director from 1880-92, Sousa brought "The President's Own" to unprecedented levels of excellence and shaped the band into a world-famous musical organization. During his tenure, the band was one of the first musical ensembles to make sound recordings. Sousa also began to write the marches that earned him the title, "The March King."

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The National Christopher Columbus Association expresses its gratitude to the following for their timely efforts, for the success of this celebration:

The Lido Club of Washington for their very generous contribution.

Vice Supreme Master Wayne Freet, PSD, of the Calvert Province, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, for his support and making the National Columbus Day Celebration a Provincial event, Steve Raschke, Master, Virginia District; Micheal Thumm, Master, Archdiocese of Washington District and Thomas Gruel, Master of the Maryland District.

Keith Amburzey and the Honor America Corps for the appearance of the 27 historical official American flags.

Mr. Ron McLendon II and Mr. Jeremy Kern, Community Relations, Director of Public Affairs, U. S. Army Military District of Washington, for participation by the Marines Color Guard, and planning arrangements for the appearance of the U.S. Marine Band, by Vadya Dillon, Marine Band Branch, Public Affairs, Pentagon.

The National Park Service for their support: Marisa Richardson, Permits Officer; Patricia Trapp, Acting Superintendent, National Mall and Memorial Parks; Alonzo Carroll, Maintenance for Special Events; and Mike Littrest, Communications.

Sgt. Erich Koehler and Officers of the U.S. Park Police.

D.C. College Councils of the Knights of Columbus, especially Catholic University of America Council 9542, for serving as ushers at the ceremony.

The National Italian American Foundation for its generous support to the National Christopher Columbus Essay Contest.

The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, Ann Turner Dillon, President General, and Virginia Hudson Trader, Historian General, and their respective staff; Regina L. Heffelfinger, National Chairman, American History Committee, and Beth Watkins, National Vice Chairman for the Christopher Columbus Essay Contest for their assistance, and co-sponsorship of the National Christopher Columbus Essay Contest, and for the vital support provided by DAR chapters throughout the United States.

Duane J. Lomis for archival videography.

The Knights of Columbus Office of Communications in New Haven, for the printing of this book and for providing photographic services.

Edward M. Sullivan, for writing the feature article for this year's program book, and for all he has done for the Association over the years.

CIVIC CEREMONY

Sponsored by
NATIONAL CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS ASSOCIATION
in cooperation with the
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
NATIONAL PARK SERVICE
NATIONAL MALL & MEMORIAL PARKS
Monday, October 8, 2018
COLUMBUS PLAZA — UNION STATION

MUSICAL PRELUDE 10:45 a.m.
“The President’s Own” United States Marine Band

POSTING OF THE COLORS 11:00 a.m.
U.S. Armed Forces Color Guard, Military District of Washington
Knights of Columbus Fourth Degree Color Corps
—Calvert Province Districts of Washington Archdiocese, Maryland and Virginia
Columbus Expeditionary Banner, Joseph Arbie as Christopher Columbus

NATIONAL ANTHEMS Spain, Italy, Bahamas,
United States of America

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE Thomas Hogan
Past President, NCCA

INVOCATION Monsignor Peter J. Vaghi
Pastor, Church of the Little Flower in Bethesda, Maryland

RETIRING OF THE COLORS U.S. Armed Forces Color Guard

WELCOME Peter Davio
Vice President, NCCA
Jeff Jones
National Park Service Site Manager for Ford's Theatre National Historic Site

REMARKS Members of Diplomatic Corps

READING OF PROCLAMATIONS

From the President of the United States of America
From the Mayor of the District of Columbia

INTRODUCTION

National Youth Columbus Essay Contest Winner

Francesca Testen, Urbana, Maryland:
“Advantages and Disadvantages of Working Relationships Between Foreign Parties”

Contest sponsored jointly by:

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY DAUGHTERS
OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

— Ann Turner Dillon, President General represented by National Vice Chair for the

Christopher Columbus Essay Contest, Beth Watkins

THE NATIONAL ITALIAN AMERICAN FOUNDATION

— Gabriella Mileti, Program Manager,
Government Affairs and Community Outreach

MUSICAL INTERLUDE

“America, the Beautiful”

*Samuel Augustus Ward, lyrics by Katherine Lee Bates
arranged by MSgt Stephen Bulla (ret.), U.S. Marine Band
MSgt Kevin Bennear, baritone*

PRESENTATION OF MEMORIAL WREATHS

National Christopher Columbus Association

National Park Service, U.S. Department of the Interior

Embassy of Spain

Embassy of Italy

Commonwealth of the Bahamas

National Italian American Foundation

National Society Daughters of the American Revolution

Supreme Council Knights of Columbus

Lido Civic Club of Washington, DC

District of Columbia State Society, Daughters
of the American Revolution

Maryland State Society, Daughters of the American Revolution

Virginia State Society, Daughters of the American Revolution

Virginia Sons of the American Revolution
District of Columbia State Council, Knights of Columbus
Maryland State Council, Knights of Columbus
Virginia State Council, Knights of Columbus
Washington Council #224, Knights of Columbus
Roma Lodge #71, Order Sons and Daughters of Italy in America
George Washington Lodge #2038,
Order Sons and Daughters of Italy in America
International Lodge #2522,
Order Sons and Daughters of Italy in America
National Council for the Promotion of Italian Language and Culture in the United States
National Society Children of the American Colonists
District of Columbia Children of the American Colonists
National Society Children of the American Revolution
District of Columbia, Children of the American Revolution
Virginia Society, Children of the American Revolution
Archdiocese of Washington Catholic Committee on Scouting

CLOSING HYMN (AUDIENCE)

“God Bless America”

Irving Berlin

arranged by Thomas Knox, U.S. Marine Band

revised by MSgt Stephen Bulla(ret.), U.S. Marine Band

MSgt Kevin Bennear, baritone

GOD BLESS AMERICA, Land that I love,
Stand beside her, and guide her
Through the night with the light from above
From the mountains, to the prairies,
To the oceans, white with foam,
GOD BLESS AMERICA My home sweet home.

MUSICAL POSTLUDE

“The Stars and Stripes Forever”

John Philip Sousa

Call for Entries

2018 – 2019 Essay Contest

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution along with

The National Italian American Foundation

are pleased to announce co-sponsorship in an essay contest featuring Christopher Columbus open to all students in grades 9 through 12.

2018-2019 TOPIC:

The three-ship fleet of Christopher Columbus included two ships known as caravels, Nina and Pinta, and one larger ship which served as Columbus' flag ship, Santa Maria. Discuss the advantages and disadvantage of these late fifteenth-century ships compared to the modern ships of today and how they would have been prepared for his voyage.

One essay is selected as the national winner and the winner is invited to attend NSDAR's 126th Continental Congress to be recognized. Second and third place winners are also selected. Judging at the national level is conducted by the National Italian American Foundation.

The national winner will receive $1,200 from the NIAF in addition to paid lodging and transportation to Washington, D.C. in October 2018 for the winner and one parent or guardian. The national winner must read the prize-winning essay at the Columbus Memorial, Washington, DC on Columbus Day (October 14, 2019). The second-place national winner will receive $500, and the third-place national winner will receive $300.

FORM

Essay must be submitted in a typed format using black type in non-script 12 or 14 point font. Each essay must have a title page listing the following: Title of essay: "Comparing Ship Technology: The Ships Columbus Used Versus the Ships of Today" as well as the contestant's full name and address, telephone number (with area code) and/or e-mail address, school name and grade level, name of the sponsoring DAR chapter, and the number of words in essay. A bibliography of sources used in preparing the essay should be attached. Published, scholarly references are preferred. This contest is administered by the NSDAR.

For further information about this contest contact:

Beth Watkins

National Vice Chairman, Christopher Columbus Essay Contest
American History Committee, NSDAR

2 Mulberry Court; Boiling Springs, PA 17007-9591

Phone: (717) 645-2212 E-Mail: Bethnsdar@aol.com

Office of the Historian General, NSDAR

1776 D Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006-5303

Phone: (202) 879-3256 E-Mail: historian@dar.org

Francesca Testen

*Urbana High School
Urbana, Maryland*

Advantages and Disadvantages of Working Relationships Between Foreign Parties

The first of Columbus' voyages and discovery of several islands in North America in 1492 started the Columbian Exchange, the transfer of flora, fauna, and diseases between the Old and New Worlds.

The discovery of the New World is one of the most important events in the history of the world, and many people remember Columbus' voyages for the impact they had on the entire world without considering the importance they had on the relations between the nations of Europe.

Columbus received financial support for his voyages from the Spanish monarchs, Ferdinand and Isabella, despite being from Genoa, Italy. There have been limited speculations as to why the Spanish monarchs would sponsor a foreign sailor such as Columbus. Ferdinand and Isabella seized upon a unique opportunity to spread Catholicism, improve relations between Spain and Italy, and be free of responsibility in the event of a crisis. The Spanish monarchs were probably more interested in their own personal gain and the benefits their country would receive. Regardless of Ferdinand and Isabella's motives, their funding of Columbus' voyages would change the world forever.

Christopher Columbus was born in Genoa, Italy, the son of a weaver. As a young man, Columbus went on several voyages in the Mediterranean and helped his father with his weaving. In 1471, Columbus made his way to Lisbon and worked as a chart maker and sailed several voyages in the name of Portugal. At the time,

Portugal and Spain were embroiled in a conflict to control the sea and trade with the Indies, a region that included the countries of China, Malaysia, Indonesia, and the Philippines. The Indies contained a wealth of silks, spices, gold, and silver. For years, these commodities were transported over land routes, often being taxed by middlemen between Asia and Europe. Europeans were in need of a new way to reach the Indies; one that was more economical.

With the advent of the caravel, a new type of sailing ship known for its improved speed and maneuverability, European countries felt that a sea route to the Indies would be more effective. In 1488, Bartolomeu Dias, a Portuguese explorer, reached the Cape of Good Hope in Africa, a feat at the time that seemed nearly impossible.

Columbus felt that instead of going East, it would be easier to sail West until he reached the Indies. However, what Columbus proposed was nothing new; the idea of sailing West to the Indies had been proposed for many centuries prior to Columbus but was never done, due to the sheer danger and fear of the unknown. However, Columbus was determined to reach the Indies and cross the vast Atlantic Ocean at any cost. Columbus proposed his idea of sailing westward to King John II, the monarch of Portugal, in the hopes of gaining the money, men, and equipment he would need for his voyage. He was refused and decided to go to the Spanish monarchs, Ferdinand and Isabella. Columbus first asked the royals to finance his voyage in 1486, but he did not gain their approval until 1492.

During that time, he made numerous attempts to convince the monarchs of the merits of his voyage. He made promises to convert the people of the Indies to Catholicism. This was no doubt a selling point for the royal couple, who were devout Catholics and had been maintaining religious homogeneity in Spain since the late 1470s in what is now known as the Spanish Inquisition.

One of the motives Columbus had for travelling to the Indies was to fulfill his duty as a good Catholic. When Columbus landed on what is now the Dominican Republic, he believed he had landed at his intended destination and not thousands of miles away. In a letter to King Ferdinand he wrote concerning the native people, "I gave them a thousand handsome good things, which I had brought, in order that they might conceive affection for us and, more than that, might become Christians and be inclined to the love and service of Your Highnesses and of the whole Castilian nation ... "

Columbus, upon seeing the native people of Espanola, considered them savage because they did not believe in God like Europeans did. He felt that it was his duty to convert them to Catholicism, not only for his God, but also for the monarchs who sponsored his voyage. Ferdinand and Isabella sponsored Columbus' voyages because he showed the same devotion to God that they did, and would help convert non-Catholics. Columbus' religious work would help improve Spain's reputation as a devout Catholic nation as well as a new world power.

While Columbus was negotiating with Ferdinand and Isabella, in his native Italy there was a great change occurring. At the time, Italy was a group of separate city states, each with its own identity and government. During The Italian Wars, which started in 1494, after Columbus' first voyage, France and Spain were fighting for control of the Italian states to assert their power.

This would change the dynamic between the three countries, and eventually Spain would have control over Italy. "Not until 1478 did the infamous "Spanish Inquisition" rear its ugly head ... the expulsion or conversion of Sicily's Jews in 1492 followed similar developments in Spain. Former Jews whose conversions to Catholicism were thought to be incomplete were tortured." (Paglia)

This period of tension between the two countries was certainly cause for Italians to dislike the Spanish monarchs. Columbus, an Italian, was sponsored by the monarchs of the nation that were responsible for persecuting and torturing his own people. The Spanish monarchs probably sponsored Columbus because they may have seen his nationality as a way to improve the tense relationship that Spain and Italy had at the time. Columbus served as the image of a true and loyal Catholic Spaniard, despite the fact that he was from Italy. Perhaps Ferdinand and Isabella hoped to encourage Italians to view them positively because of their support of an Italian sailor.

As the ruler of a country, one is responsible for the actions of their citizens. Spanish monarchs may have sponsored Columbus' voyage to the Indies because even though he was representing the Spanish crown, he was of Italian origin. This meant that Ferdinand and Isabella would not be held accountable for his actions. If Columbus were to do something that could be condemned or looked down upon by Spanish citizens, it would not be the responsibility of Spain.

Ferdinand and Isabella could use Columbus' connection to Italy as a loophole if something were to go wrong to protect themselves. In this way, the Spanish monarchs only spent money, not their country's reputation. The freedom from liability was probably another reason why Ferdinand and Isabella decided to sponsor Columbus' voyage, rather than risk their reputation by sponsoring a Spaniard. The voyages of Christopher Columbus not only changed the world, but also helped the monarchs of Spain that financed his voyages. With Columbus' voyages, Spanish monarchs were able to improve their standing among European nations, preserve Spain's image of religious devotion, and kept themselves free of responsibility in the event of a crisis.

Bibliography

- Ryan, Edward A. "Spanish Inquisition." Encyclopaedia Britannica. Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc., 20 Apr. 2017. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<<http://www.britannica.com/topic/Spanish-Inquisition>>.
 - New World Encyclopedia Contributors. "Spanish Inquisition." Spanish Inquisition – New World Encyclopedia. New World Encyclopedia, 15 Oct. 2015. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<http://www.newworldencyclopedia.org/entry/Spanish_Inquisition>.
 - Jones, Jim. "Background to Journal of the First Voyage by Christopher Columbus." Christopher Columbus, Journal of the First Voyage. West Chester University of Pennsylvania, 2013. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<<http://courses.wcupa.edu/jones/his101/web/36columb.htm>>.
 - Columbus, Christopher. "Letter to King Ferdinand of Spain, Describing the Results of the First Voyage." Letter to King Ferdinand of Spain. 4 Mar. 1493. Xroads.virginia. N.p., n.d. Web. 11 Nov. 2017. <<http://xroads.virginia.edu/~hyper/lms/garden/columbus.html>>.
 - Spanish Colonization of the Americas. Boise: Boise State, n.d. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<http://edtech2.boisestate.edu/amandaweiskircher/Documents/spanish_colonization.pdf>
 - Keegan, William. "Columbus, Hero or Heel?" Columbus. VISTA Magazine/Florida Museum of Natural History, 24 Mar. 1991. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<<https://www.floridamuseum.ufl.edu/caribarch/columbus.htm>>. Article originally published in VISTA magazine on Mar. 24. 1991.
 - History.com Staff. "Columbus Lands in South America." History.com. A&E Television Networks, 2010. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<<http://www.history.com/this-day-in-history/columbus-lands-in-south-america>>.
 - Watkins, Thayer. "The Spanish and Portuguese Conquest of the Americas." The Spanish and Portuguese Conquest of the Americas. San Jose State University, n.d. Web. 11 Nov. 2017.
<<http://www.sjsu.edu/faculty/watkins/theconquest.htm>>.
 - History.com Staff. "Bartolomeu Dias." History.com. A&E Television Networks, 2009. Web. 12 Nov. 2017. <<http://www.history.com/topics/exploration/bartolomeu-dias>>.
 - Paglia, Robert. "The Inquisition in Sicily." Visit Best of Sicily. Best of Sicily Magazine, 2005. Web. 12 Nov. 2017. <<http://www.bestofsicily.com/mag/art169.htm>>.
 - The Editors of Encyclopaedia Britannica. "Italian Wars." Encyclopaedia Britannica. Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc., 04 Mar. 2016. Web. 12 Nov. 2017.
<<https://www.britannica.com/event/Italian-Wars>>.
 - Morison, Samuel Eliot. Christopher Columbus, Mariner. New York: Meridian, Penguin, 1942. Print.
- Sources cited on easybib.com

The National Christopher Columbus Association

Annual Columbus Day celebrations have been held at the Columbus Memorial and Fountain at Columbus Plaza in Washington, D.C. ever since it was unveiled in 1912.

In 1989, a permanent organization, the Washington Columbus Celebration Association, was formed in order to plan the observance of the forthcoming Quincentenary anniversary in 1992, and to put the annual ceremonies on a firmer footing with permanent sponsorship.

Ten years later, the name of the organization was changed to the National Columbus Celebration Association.

In August of 2013, a proposal to change the organization's name to the National Christopher Columbus Association was approved and the new name became effective in 2014. The change reflects a decision to broaden the organization's focus in the areas of education and scholarship, taking its involvement beyond the annual Columbus Day activities in the nation's capital.

The Association invites individuals and organizations who identify with its purposes to become members, and an application may be found elsewhere in this booklet. The bylaws of the NCCA state that "The Association seeks to honor not only the memory of Columbus and his historic achievement in linking the Old World and the New, but also the higher values that motivated him in his efforts and trials."

Become a member of the NCCA

The Association seeks to honor not only the memory of Columbus and his historic achievements in linking the Old World and the New, but also the higher values that motivated and sustained him in his efforts and his trials. Those virtues - faith in God, the courage of his convictions, dedication to purpose, perseverance in effort, professional excellence, and boldness in facing the unknown - are vitally important and worthy of emulation in every era.

The Association invites individuals and organizations who identify with our purposes to join with us by filling out the application below and sending it to the address given. You may also fill out a membership application on our website, at www.columbuscelebration.com Members receive a gold-plated membership pin, a membership certificate suitable for framing, an invitation to the annual meeting with the right to vote, minutes, and their names are listed in the program published for the annual celebration. National Patrons will be listed in the annual program book and will be sent a copy of the program book on request.

Annual dues (please check the appropriate box):

- Organizational member (business, professional, nonprofit, patriotic or fraternal) $75.00
- Individual member $25.00

Please print your name exactly as you wish it to appear on the certificate:

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Telephone _____ E-mail _____

Mail your completed application with payment to:

National Christopher Columbus Association

Attn: Steven J. Upton, Secretary

5034 Wisconsin Ave., NW

Washington, D.C. 20015-4125

The NCCA is a tax-exempt organization under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, and is qualified to receive tax deductible contributions, bequests, devises, transfers or gifts under IRS Code Sections 170, 2055, 2106, or 2522

BIOGRAPHIES

Francesca Testen, this year's essay contest winner graduated from Urbana High School in Maryland in May 2018 and plans to pursue a degree in History and Political Science at the University of Glasgow this fall. When she's not busy with school, she enjoys drawing comics for her webcomic The History Twins, writing both fiction and non-fiction works, and reading. She also likes to paint, listen to music, and go bike riding. She is very grateful to have been able to participate in both the DAR and JAC contests over the past three years as she feels it helped improve her writing and research skills, and allowed her to learn more about our country's history. She's confident that the skills that she has used for the DAR contests will aid her in her future career as a museum curator or history teacher.

Msgr. Peter Vaghi, pastor of the Church of the Little Flower in Bethesda, Maryland, and is a priest of the Archdiocese of Washington. He received theological training at the Pontifical North American College and Gregorian University, both in Rome. He is a graduate of University of Virginia Law School, practiced law for many years and remains a member of the Virginia State Bar and the District of Columbia Bar. He serves as chaplain of the John Carroll Society, a group of professional men and women in service of the Archbishop of Washington. He is the author of the Pillars of Faith series and has written a number of articles for America, Priest, and Our Sunday Visitor. He has also contributed to two collections of writings on priestly spirituality: Behold Your Mother and Born of the Eucharist.

James P McCusker, President of the NCCA, was born in Uniontown, Pennsylvania; joined the Navy after High School and became a Hospital Corpsman, serving on both ships and at Naval hospitals. He is a graduate of Benjamin Franklin University in Washington, DC with a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration and a Master's Degree in Contract Law and Program Management from George Washington University. During his career in the Federal Government, he served in the Pentagon Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Acquisition. He is an active member of the Knights of Columbus, ultimately having served as State Deputy for Virginia and then Membership and Programs Consultant for the Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus.

In addition to serving as President and member of the Board of Directors of the National Christopher Columbus Association he also serves on the Board of Directors of Medical Missionaries, supporting the medical needs of the poor.

In Remembrance

Patrick S. Korten (1948 – 2018)

A member of the Board of Directors of the National Christopher Columbus Association, Patrick was an accomplished communicator, beginning as founder and first editor-in-chief of the Badger Herald, an independent student newspaper while in college. He began his broadcasting career at the university radio station, and then worked at a local Madison radio station before moving to Washington, D.C., where he worked on the Congressional staffs of U.S. Reps. Bob Bauman and Barry Goldwater Jr., and at the American Conservative Union. In 1975 he became a reporter and anchor at WTOP News Radio, the CBS affiliate in Washington, D.C.

He left broadcasting to join the Reagan Administration where he was director of policy and communications at the U.S. Office of Personnel Management under Director Donald J. Devine; then deputy director and then director of public affairs at the U.S. Department of Justice serving under Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Patrick also was deputy vice president for communications at the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA), vice president of communications for The Cato Institute, a Libertarian think tank, and vice president for communications at The Becket Fund for Religious Liberty. He was senior vice president of the Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus, a 1.9-million-member Catholic fraternal benefit society, until he retired in 2014.

He served as director of communications for the Virginia State Council of the Knights of Columbus and was also a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, an avid photographer, and a major fan of the Washington Nationals baseball team and the Green Bay Packers football team. Patrick passed away in March, 2018 after suffering a stroke.

Featured Article

In Search of Columbus

Revisionist writings in the last several decades have done much to change in a negative way the traditional popular view of Columbus, leading to relatively widespread anti-Columbus views and actions at the time of the 1992 Quincentenary--and to attacks which continue and grow in the present iconoclastic era. Here we look at several books of recent years and how they treat Columbus, pro or contra . (What follows below has been adapted, with some additions, from articles in our 2012 program book celebrating the centennial of the dedication of the Columbus Memorial in Washington, DC.)

1. Sources: Early Writings about Columbus

Problems of Interpretation

As will be seen shortly, some of the criticisms of writings on Columbus claim they exhibit undue trust in the veracity of the writers of source documents (including Columbus himself)--or suffer from misreading of texts, or ignorance of the original language of the texts, or of the background culture, or of the motivations of the authors.

Some of these problems are well-discussed in the 1997 volume, Miles H. Davidson's "Columbus Then and Now: A Life Reexamined" (Norman and London, University of Oklahoma Press 1997). Described as "an independent scholar living in the Dominican Republic", Davidson draws on original sources contained or reproduced in the Miles H. Davidson Library of Dominican History, which he founded (whose holdings are listed in an annotated catalog published by him under the title "A Columbus Handbook 1997").

His book introduction explains that "The present critique results from my discomfort with many of the Columbus biographies published over the last two decades of the twentieth century. It is restricted to works published in the United States because this group appears to form a genre in itself. As will be noted elsewhere, many of these works are not without merit, but they are, without exception, faulty historiographically. Many of their misconstructions and even errors are shared ones, hence forming a genre. These standard modern works include studies by Samuel Eliot Morison, John Noble Wilford, William and Carla Rahn Phillips, Felipe Fernández-Armesto, Kirkpatrick Sale, and Robert H. Fuson." (Some of these books will be discussed below.)

His introduction further provides (on pp xi-xix) a useful description and explanation of some of the major problems involved in relying on materials from another age, another culture, and another language, by people whose motivations may not be entirely trustworthy.

Major early sources

Before proceeding to consider some of these recent books, as background it is useful to look first at some of the key source documents, the interpretation of which often gives rise to the problems Davidson describes.

These source documents can be grouped into three categories:

- (1) Accounts by Columbus himself,
- (2) Letters and documents by other participants in his expeditions, and
- (3) Early accounts by others.

(Though of earlier origin, some of these were not published until the 19th or even the 20th century.)

1. Accounts by Columbus himself:

- His second (and illegitimate) son Ferdinand (Hernando) says that his father kept a journal for each of his voyages. The journal of the first is lost, but Ferdinand used it in writing the biography of his father, and Bartolomé de Las Casas had access to it and made an abstract (the closest thing to the original) with many direct quotations for use in writing his “History of the Indies,” and also a less detailed abstract (also still available) of the now lost journal of the third voyage. The journal of the second voyage is almost entirely lost, and there is no knowledge of one for the fourth voyage.
- Columbus also wrote letter reports to the sovereigns, including one while returning from the first voyage (aboard ship January 16-March 15, 1493) sent to court treasurer Louis de Santángel, his supporter; one on the third voyage (October 18, 1498); and the Lettera Rarrissima (July 7, 1503) carried back from Jamaica by the Mendez party seeking help for the marooned expedition of the fourth voyage. He wrote another letter on the third voyage (October, 1500, while returning in chains) to Doña Juana de Torres, a confidante of the queen.
- A sixteenth century collection of nine of his letters, including some—previously unknown—to the Spanish rulers came to light only in 1985, and a transcription of them was made available in 1989 under the title “El libro copiator de Cristobol Colón.”
- Between his ignominious return in chains in 1500 and his departure on the fourth voyage in 1502 he wrote his “Book of Privileges” (defending his claims to titles and monies, since his records had been seized in Hispaniola) and his “Book of Prophecies” (composed as a poetic attempt to explain to the sovereigns their--and his--divine vocation regarding the New World, as will be discussed later).
- His thinking is also shown in marginal notes (postils) in his books, made over many years.

2. Letters and documents by other participants in his expeditions:

Foremost is the biography of his father by Ferdinand (Fernando, Hernando, 1488- 1539), based on the journals, as well as on conversations with his father, his father's letters, and his own experiences on the fourth voyage. Written in his own later life, it was published posthumously in an Italian translation in 1571. The Spanish original is lost.

Other documents include:

- A letter by Columbus's friend Michele de Cuneo (May 29, 1493) and one by the fleet physician, Dr. Diego Alvarez Chanca, both dealing with the second voyage, Dr. Chanca's ending with the founding of Isabela.
- Letters by Guillermo Coma of Aragon, who was on that voyage, writing about it to his friend Nicolo Syllacio, who translated the letters into Latin for publication in late 1494 or early 1495.
- Recollections by Diego Mendez de Segura, a loyal supporter and friend of Columbus who played a crucial role at several points on the fourth voyage, and included extensive descriptions of some key events of that expedition in his will, executed on June 6, 1536 in Valladolid.
- Testimony given in the suit by Columbus's heirs against the crown, given by some participants of the first voyage supporting the allegation that the credit for its results was due to Pinzón rather than Columbus.

3. Early accounts by others:

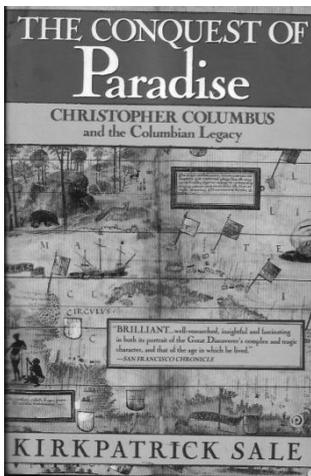

- Luis de la Cerda, the duke of Medina Celi (who had earlier befriended Columbus) wrote a report to the Archbishop of Toledo on March 19, 1493, four days after Columbus returned from his first voyage.
- Hannibal Januarius, a merchant in Barcelona where the sovereigns were then holding court, wrote on April 9, 1493 to his brother in Milan.
- Italian cleric and diplomat at Barcelona (where Columbus arrived in mid-April and stayed for five or six weeks), Peter Martyr d'Anghiera (1457-1526), interviewed Columbus whenever he could, and wrote a series of letters to various parties, starting on May 14, 1493, later collected in eight volumes (called "Decades"), the first of which was published in 1501.
- Andrés Bernáldez, a friend of Columbus, wrote a history covering the beginning of the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella to 1513, providing much detail on the second voyage (from Dr. Chanca and other participants, including Columbus, he said). He provided less information on the first, and sketchier accounts of the third and fourth voyages.

- Gonzalo Fernández de Oviedo of Madrid (1478 -1557), a former court page, was educated in the classics and arts, went to America in 1514, and wrote a General and Natural History of the Indies published in 1535.
- Apart from Columbus's son Fernando, the most important biographer was Bartolomé de las Casas (1475- or 1484-1566; birth date uncertain), who was ordained about 1507, joined the Dominicans in 1523, was consecrated bishop of Chiapa, Mexico, 1544, and was in Spain promoting the cause of the Indians, 1547-49. He began his history of the Indies in 1527 in Hispaniola, working on it until 1534, then set it aside for active ministry until retiring his bishopric in 1550. Though planning to cover the entire period 1492 to 1550, he was able to bring it up only to 1520. It was not published until the 1870s.

2. Relatively Recent Books on Columbus

In the 19th and 20th centuries, a number of important documents (including items listed above) dating from the time of Columbus were published for the first time, or made available in English for the first time, along with a much greater number of later and secondary documents. There was also a good deal of new writing about Columbus and his times. According to a 1986 bibliography, between 1880 and 1985 alone 3,271 articles and books were published on the subject, of which 800 could be considered scholarly.

In the words of one commentator: “The most important effect of the new material and the new scholarship of this century has been to demythify Columbus the Discoverer and resuscitate Colón the Man, providing for the first time a much more complex, and more interesting, three-dimensional figure, including foibles, figments, and failures” (Kirkpatrick Sale, “The Conquest of Paradise: Christopher Columbus and the Columbian Legacy,” New York, Alfred A. Knopf, 1990, p. 355).

But many also now came to view Western (i.e., European) civilization, so dominant for centuries, as an evil influence that had unjustly invaded, exploited, and despoiled the innocent world of the Americas, led, moreover, by a greedy, cruel, mendacious, grasping, self-seeking adventurer who brought enslavement and genocide to native populations, and environmental disaster to a paradise where the innocent inhabitants had generally lived in an almost preternatural harmony with nature and with each other. The former hero Christopher Columbus was now accused of causing and therefore personifying all of the evils. Western Civilization and Columbus personally were not to be praised as before, but condemned! His voyage of “discovery” was something to atone for rather than celebrate.

And its coming 500th anniversary was a golden opportunity to score public points. As 1992 approached, a slew of writings expressed such views, with educational materials propagating through schools. And with effect: the 1992 celebration was muted, downplaying Columbus or Colón the man—to use the Spanish name by which he is known—in exhibits and publications, and emphasizing other aspects of 1492, such as the “encounter” between two worlds (the word “Discovery” was proscribed, and is still ridiculously challenged today), and the “Columbian exchange” of plants and animals (and germs) between the two worlds.

And, of course, the developed sense of victimhood expressed itself in various in-your-face protests, such as disruption of the celebration and defacing of the Washington memorial in 1991. The fascinating book, “Sinking Columbus; Contested History, Cultural Politics, and Mythmaking during the Quincentenary” by Stephen J. Summerhill and John Alexander Williams (who headed the Christopher Columbus Jubilee Commission from 1986 to 1988) and published by the University of Florida Press in 2000, reports on how the Quincentenary was observed around the world. A descriptive review can be found at <https://networks.h-et.org/node/23910/reviews/54381/kicza-summerhill-and-williams-sinking-columbus-contested-history>

Probably the most influential and certainly best-known anti-Columbus work was the one referred to above, the well-written, heavily-researched and annotated book, “The Conquest of Paradise,” by the environmental activist and writer Kirkpatrick Sale, which reached a wide audience as a main selection of the Book-of-the-Month-Club. It does contain much interesting and useful information and was well received according to the laudatory blurbs reproduced on its preliminary pages, but the opinion was not unanimous. For example, Robert Royal, then Vice President of the Center for Ethics and Public Policy in Washington, D.C., in his “1492 and All That: Political Manipulations of History,” (Washington: Ethics and Public Policy Center, 1992) on p. 22 passes a harsh judgment, not itself free from hyperbole:

His account of 1492 and after is a relentless venting of bile. Sale is vivid, learned, obsessed, sneering, contemptuous, skeptical of anything that reflects well on Columbus or European culture and ultimately credulous about every evil attributed or attributable to Columbus, by himself or others. In addition he presents with renewed contemporary credulity the old myth of noble savages and ignoble Europeans.

Royal's slim volume, just over 200 pages, goes against the grain of the time, countering point by point, in detail and in a rather convincing way, the issues raised by Sale and others as the Quincentenary approached. Included in Royal's discussion are the general myths that had currency but little or no basis in fact and false ideas about Columbus himself, about the role of churchmen and the Church, about the evilness of Western culture, and about the innocent paradise that awaited and was despoiled by the Spaniards. (A much abbreviated expression of his ideas on the subject is his booklet "Columbus on Trial: 1492 v. 1992," originally published by Young America's Foundation in 1992, and republished by it since.

Columbus (or Colón) the Man

It is however, Columbus the man himself who concerns us here, and we leave it to Royal to address the other matters as he capably does. The "demythification" of Columbus which Sale praised in the new scholarship has in turn, Sale says (on p.356),

...led to the realization that much of what Colón had said about himself, and what he presumably told his son Fernando and his admirer Las Casas [his principal biographers], was simply not true, and much else was highly dubious or quite unprovable. Thus scholars of this century have inevitably come to be concerned with a reexamination not only of the Colón version of events...but of the character and personality of the man himself, with a frankness and a skepticism that were not deemed suitable before."

The new areas of inquiry have been many, some frivolous even, but among the most important have been: Colón's religiosity, whether genuine or contrived to please the Sovereigns, and the importance in his enterprise of messianic zeal and mysticism rather than the lure of gold or love of adventure; the extent to which Colón is to be seen as a 'medieval' as opposed to a 'Renaissance' man and whether his ideas of geography and colonial governance, among others, are to be regarded as modern inventions or archaic survivals, the amount and kind of Colón's pre-Discovery reading and learning, the scholarly influences that made up the Grand Scheme, and the languages he may have known and been literate in; the character and skill of his navigation and the degree to which his successes were due to fixation and good fortune and his failures (to go west, for example, when he could have) to myopia and ill fortune; and his physical health, the cause and nature of his illness, and particularly the extent to which this might have affected his perceptions and judgments, his very sanity, on later voyages.

So—it is all up for grabs!

In considering these questions it is helpful to distinguish between (1) Columbus's motivations, (2) his intentions, (3) his actions and (4) their consequences, both immediate and long-term. Much of the anti-Columbus criticism is based on the last two, especially the last. As Sale put it elsewhere, “In the final analysis, it is not so important whether Columbus was a good man. What matters is that he brought over a culture centered on its own superiority. The failings of the man were and remain the failures of the culture.” (As quoted by Royal, p. 57.)

We can readily agree with Royal’s response that “It certainly does matter, if only for the sake of historical justice, that we try to discern the mix of good and evil in Columbus per se. Furthermore, no one can simply be identified with a whole culture. Every individual both draws on and opposes elements in his surroundings. Columbus, like the rest of us, was not simply good or bad. As a great human spirit, both his virtues and faults appear larger and more vivid than they do in most people. And his historical influence reflects the dimensions of what he was.”

To state what should be obvious, one can be blamed only for his intentions and his actions that result from them--but not for all the unforeseen and unwilled consequences.

To set the stage for what follows, it may be helpful to suggest a few things about making inferences:

- Intentions can be inferred, rightly or wrongly, by reasoning backward from actions or forward from motivations. (Making an inference is of course a chancy and error-prone thing; it means to make a judgment, which may prove to be a wrong one, among competing probable explanations.)
- Motivations can be inferred, rightly or wrongly, by reasoning backward from intentions, or perhaps indirectly from actions. But the latter is a tenuous two-step process involving an inference about intentions and then from that a second inference about motivation—with twice the risk of error.
- Motivations, on the other hand, are influenced by and can be inferred from one’s milieu—both present and past—and one’s personal history.

Moving away from the focus on consequences (which characterizes much of the critique of Columbus), and keeping our focus on Columbus the man, below we look at three sets of books, most relatively recent, that focus respectively, on (1) the events and actions of Columbus’s life; (2) his milieu and his intentions, and (3) his milieu and his motivations.

Action-focused Books

One recent book focused on the retelling of events is “Columbus: The Four Voyages,” by writer Laurence Bergreen (New York: Viking, 2011). However, Bergreen seems to miss no opportunity to refer to Columbus’s “greed.” On page 7, he summarizes accurately some of the modern criticisms, not saying whether or not he agrees with them, though the way he reports incidents later in the book does suggest agreement with some of them:

As an explorer, the Admiral of the Ocean Sea is widely seen as an opportunist who made his great discovery without ever acknowledging it for what it was, and proceeded to enslave the populace he found, encourage genocide, and pollute relations between peoples who were previously unknown to each other. He was even assumed to have carried syphilis back to Europe with him to torment Europe for centuries thereafter. He excused his behavior, and his legacy, by saying that he merely acted as God’s instrument, even as he beseeched his Sovereigns, Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, to enrich his family.

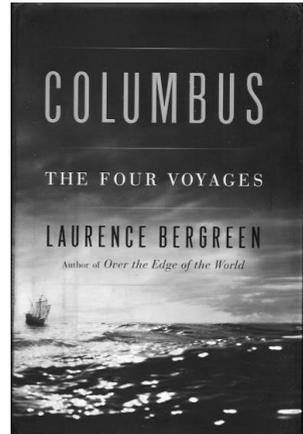

He then gets more personal and psychological, but without making a big point of it there or elsewhere:

Obsessed with his God-given task of finding Asia, Columbus undertook four voyages within the span of a decade, each very different, each designed to demonstrate that he could sail to China within a matter of weeks and convert those he found there to Christianity. But as the voyages grew in complexity and sophistication, and as Columbus failed to reconcile his often violent experiences as a captain and provincial governor with the demands of his faith, he became progressively less rational and more extreme, until it seemed as if he lived more in his glorious illusions than in the grueling reality his voyages laid bare. If the first voyage illustrates the rewards of exploration, the subsequent three voyages illustrate the costs—political, moral, and economic.

All in all, however, Bergreen’s criticism is much milder than that of many around the time of the Quincentenary.

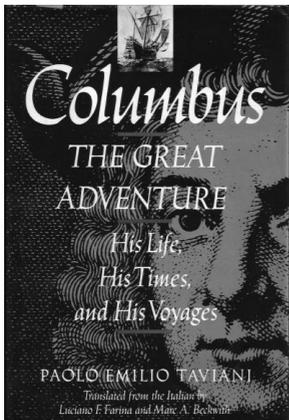

Other Action-oriented Books

An action focus follows the lead of Samuel Eliot Morison who authored the outstanding twentieth century Columbus biography in English, “Admiral of the Ocean Sea.” He said (on p. 3, vol. 1 of the 1962 Time, Inc. edition): “My main concern [in this book] is with the Columbus of action, the Discoverer.... I am content to leave his ‘psychology,’ his ‘motivation’ and all that to others.” Morison, a noted Harvard and Navy historian, and later a rear admiral himself, was in fact a lifelong admirer of Columbus, calling him “my hero.” Widely praised, his biography is considered to have followed in the popularizing tradition of Washington Irving, but eschewing Irving’s additions to the Columbus story that lacked a factual foundation. Morison also did a shorter one-volume biography (“Christopher Columbus, Mariner,” New York: New American Library, 1956).

Both Irving and Morison have been spoken of as exemplars of the “romantic” tradition, as also was the Genoese Paolo Emilio Taviani, for many years a professor of economic history, and the leading 20th century Italian biographer of Columbus. He authored a two-volume biography and other books on the Admiral. There he focuses on the Admiral’s Genoese background and the events of his life, giving summary comments about his mentality and character at the end of his book (p.253-54):

On the level of scrupulous, rigorous historicity, Columbus was neither a saint or a shrewd politician. His misfortunes cannot be explained as simply bad luck, caused by the maliciousness of his enemies and the envy of those who could not abide a foreigner of modest origins being granted such privileges and high honors. He was neither inept nor inefficient, but he lacked the two essential gifts of a politician [which Taviani himself was]: the capacity to make firm decisions for the long run and a keen knowledge of human nature, indispensable for putting the right people in the right position.

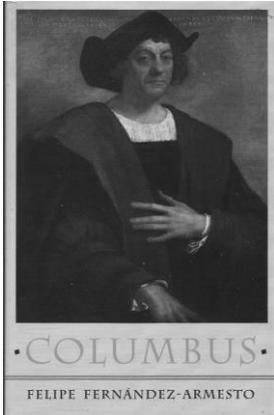

In reality he bestrode the two ages [the Middle Ages and the Renaissance]: his theoretical approach to philosophy, theology, and even science was medieval, whereas his zeal for scientific investigation, keen interest in nature, and capacity for accepting phenomena previously unobserved or unexplained were peculiar to the Renaissance. ...

Psychologically he was a modern man. Concrete and pragmatic to the point of being overmeticulous, he elaborated his projects only after he had acquired direct experience, and from it sprang the conception for his grand design. In short, he had a modern psychology but roots in the Middle Ages.

The same can be said about his spirituality. He was a Christian and Catholic in the modern sense yet influenced by medieval teachings. His faith was strong, sincere, and inexhaustible, pure at times and untainted by superstition and hypocrisy in the most demanding of circumstances. He was at times a fanatic or, as we would say today, a true believer. But his fanaticism never violated the eternal principles of the Christian and Catholic worldview.

Focusing on the Mind of Columbus and his Milieu

A focus opposite to that on events was adopted by Felipe Fernández-Armesto in his book “Columbus” (New York: Oxford University Press, 1991), published about the same time as Taviani’s, and described by Columbus defender Royal (p.30 of “1492 and All That”) as “the most sober, penetrating, and least partisan of the crop of quincentenary books.” In his own preface Fernández-Armesto states (p. vii):

This book has been written in the belief that readers want unadorned facts about Columbus, as far as these can be elicited. I have tried to say nothing which cannot be verified—or in some cases reasonably inferred—from unimpeachable sources. Narratives of the sixteenth century have been excluded, except where they can be shown to reflect sources otherwise lost.... Even accounts written soon after Columbus’s death by privileged observers have been sparingly used, subject to corroboration. Columbus’s own narratives, which can hardly be foregone, have been handled tentatively and scrutinized carefully for the promotional or exculpatory purposes that distorted almost every thought Columbus ever confided to paper. One result of my reliance on Columbus’s own writings, and of my skeptical treatment of them, is that much of this book is not so much about what happened to Columbus as about what was going on in his mind, which—surprisingly, perhaps—is easier to know.

The Columbus who emerges may not be much more objective than any other.... The Columbus I detect—the socially ambitious, socially awkward parvenu; the autodidact, intellectually aggressive but easily inhibited by fear of failure—is, I believe, consistent with the evidence; but it would no doubt be possible to reconstruct the image, from the same evidence, in other ways. Other students have imagined him essentially as a practical tarpaulin, or a ruthless materialist, or a mystic seer, or an embodiment of bourgeois capitalism; the springs of his motivation have been perceived in an evangelical impulse, or in some more generalized religious conviction, or in crusading zeal, or in scientific curiosity, or in esoteric or even ‘secret’ knowledge, or in greed. I find these versions unconvincing, but I have not written in order to advance my own view at their expense—only to satisfy readers who want to make their own choices from within the range of genuine possibilities.

He actively defies three traditions of Columbus historiography: (1) “the mystifying tradition, concerned to reveal allegedly cryptic truths which the evidence cannot disclose,” such as Columbus’s non-Genoese provenance based on forged documents, or secret foreknowledge before his discovery voyage, etc.; (2) the tradition that “treats paucity of evidence as a pretext for intuitive guesswork”; and (3) “subscribing to a legend of the explorer’s own making.”

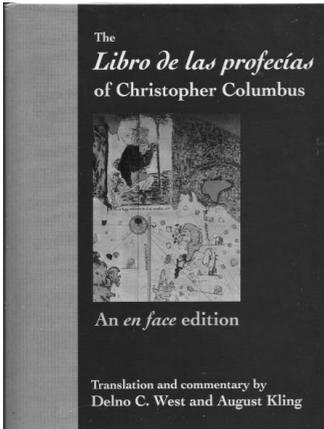

As for the influence of the milieu, he further writes in his introduction (pp. x-xi):

Columbus is seen best--understood, that is, most fully--in the contexts in which he belonged: the Genoese world of the late fifteenth century; the partly Genoese Lisbon and Andalusia to which he moved at a critical period of his career; the court of the Spanish monarchs, which was effectively his base of operations in the second half of his life; the mapping and exploration of the Atlantic in his day; the world of geographical speculation by which he was surrounded; and, in a remoter background, the slow shift of the centre of gravity of eastern civilization from the Mediterranean to the Atlantic, to which he made such an important contribution.

In regard to the “mapping and exploration of the Atlantic,” after reviewing toward the end of the book seven special major contributions Columbus made to maritime knowledge, he says admiringly (p. 191) that “Any of these would qualify an explorer for enduring fame; together they constitute an unequalled record of achievement.” He goes on with summary observations about the mind and character of Columbus (pp. 191-192):

Columbus was a self-avowed ignoramus who challenged the received wisdom of his day. His servility before old texts, combined with his paradoxical delight whenever he was able to correct them from experience, mark him at once as one of the last torchbearers of medieval cosmography, who carried their lights on the shoulders of their predecessors, and one of the first beacons of the Scientific Revolution, whose glow was kindled from within by their preference for experiment over authority. The same sort of paradox enlivened every aspect of his character. His attraction toward fantasy and wishful thinking was ill accommodated in that hard head, half-full already with a sense of trade and profit. In his dealings with the Crown and his concern for his posterity [elsewhere on p.179 he views “dynastic ambition” as “the motor of Columbus’s life”], his mysticism was tempered by a materialism only slightly less intense--like the rich gurus who are equally familiar nowadays in spiritual retreats and business circles. Though religion was a powerful influence in his life, its effects were strangely limited; his devotional bequests were few; his charity began and almost ended at home. The Indians he discovered he contemplated with evangelical zeal and treated with callous disregard. He was an inveterate practitioner of deception, a perennial victim of self-delusion, but he was rarely consciously mendacious. In dealing with subordinates, he was calculating and ingenuous by turns. He craved admirers, but could not keep friends. His anxiety for ennoblement, his self-confessed ambition for ‘status and wealth,’ did not prevent him from taking a certain pride in his modest origins and comparing the weaver-Admiral with the shepherd-King. He loved adventure, but could not bear adversity. Most paradoxically of all, beyond the islands and mainlands of the Ocean, Columbus explored involuntarily the marshlands between genius and insanity. Times of stress unhinged--sometimes, perhaps, actually deranged--him; in his last such sickness, he obsessively discarded his own most luminous ideas, and never revered them.

One cannot do him justice without making allowances for the weakness that incapacitated him for ill fortune. He was too fearful of failure to face adverse reality--perhaps because he had too much riding on success: not only his personal pride, but also the claims to the material rewards on which his hopes for himself and his heirs rested.

Focusing on the Motivations of Columbus— and his Milieu

Finally, two relatively recent books focus on religion as a—if not the—primary motivator for Columbus.

The first of was by Columbus himself, made available in English only in 1982. It was his “Book of Prophecies,” a counterpart to his better-known “Book of Privileges,” both written in the months during which he was cooling his heels waiting to see the sovereigns after his return in chains in 1501.

The “Book of Prophecies” was intended to be a long poem to the sovereigns focusing on God’s call to them and to him regarding the retaking of the Holy Land. An edition in the original languages (Latin and Spanish) with English translation on the facing pages was published in 1991 by the University of Florida Press (Delno C. West and August Kling, translators, “The Libro de la profecías of Christopher Columbus: An en face edition.”) There is an excellent introduction by the translators, tracing the influence of religion on Columbus’s motivations.

The second book, published in 2011, is the most appealing of the very recent ones: Carol Delaney’s “Columbus and the Quest for Jerusalem” (New York: Simon and Schuster Free Press, 2011). Delaney holds an MTS from Harvard Divinity School and a PhD in Cultural Anthropology from the University of Chicago, and focuses in particular on the historical context and the milieu in which Columbus grew up and lived, the motivating force of religion in his life, the millenarian mindset he exhibited, and the resulting passion he showed for the retaking of Jerusalem and for acquiring the resources to help bring that about. In the Introduction, she says (on p.xiii): “Judging Columbus from a present-day ethical standard is not only anachronistic, it reduces his intentions to their (unintended) effects; that is, it mistakes the consequences for the motivations. My purpose is not to exonerate Columbus, but to situate him in his cultural context and to shift some of our attention from the man to the religious ideas that motivated him and were widely shared by his contemporaries—ideas that have reemerged in the twentieth and twenty-first centuries.” By the last, she means millenarianism.

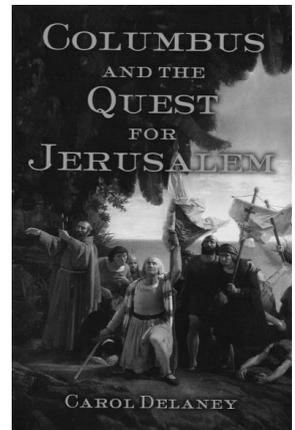

She goes on (pp. xiii-xvi): The Christian faith was not just a moral guide to life; it also incorporated a worldview—a view of the world in its widest (cosmological) context. ...Mappae mundi were not meant to accurately represent the physical world; instead they were a form of religious education—a topography of faith—pointing out places of religious-historical significance.... Jerusalem was center stage both spiritually and physically....It was the place where [Jesus] would return to usher in the Last Days as portrayed in the book of Revelation or Apocalypse,...the question, always, was ‘When will He come?’ ...Before the end, however, several conditions were necessary to prepare for Christ's return: all peoples had to be evangelized and hopefully converted so they would be saved from eternal damnation; Jerusalem had to be in Christian hands in order that the Temple could be rebuilt, for that was to be Christ's throne as he sat in judgment. The apocalyptic scenario included a notion of an Antichrist, at that time identified with Muslims, who would try to seduce people from their faith, and a Last World Emperor, who would come forth to defeat the Antichrist, conquer Jerusalem, restore the Holy Sepulchre, and unite the whole world unum ovile, unus pastor (one fold, one pastor) as the Gospel of John (10:16) proclaimed.... These ideas had been circulating long before Columbus was born; they were hardly original with him but they would greatly influence his plan to sail west to the 'Indies' (cover term for the East).

The quest for Jerusalem was Columbus's grand passion; it was the vision that sustained him through all the trials and tribulations he felt, like Job that he endured.

Like her fellow authors, Delaney traces the principal events of the voyages, but is also very good at providing for many of Columbus's actions, especially the controversial ones, the background cultural or environmental context with fresh details that help us better understand why he acted thus, and even in some cases be better able to reconcile them with his religious outlook where the two might seem in conflict. As to his intentions, she infers (p.237):

Columbus did not intend to supplant the native peoples with Europeans or steal their land; later, faced with rebellion, he capitulated to the settlers' demands, and Isabella eventually approved land grants to them. He surely did not intend to commit genocide, of which he has been accused. He wanted to enlist the khan and his people on his side not to destroy them. Nor was his intention to obtain slaves; there was no possibility of enslaving the people in the civilized, luxurious world of the Grand Khan. When he met the native people, he thought that they were attractive and intelligent and because they had no false sectas, that they could easily become Christian.... Later when he proposed sending some of the natives back to Spain as slaves, he distinguished between the friendly ones he knew and the warlike people called canibales or Caribes who were 'idolaters' said to eat human flesh. People who waged war against Christians or contravened the law of nature by such primitive, inhuman practices as cannibalism could be enslaved according to papal policy at the time. Thus, Columbus thought 'it could not be anything but well' to take them to Spain, where they would lose that habit and thereby save their souls, and he specifically requested that they be better treated than other slaves

A Critical Review of two of the above books

Fernández-Armesto, formerly at Oxford but later a professor at Notre Dame, whose book "Columbus" was discussed above, last September 17 (this was written in 2012) covered four new books in a Wall Street Journal review rather supercilious in tone. Two were those by Bergreen and Delaney discussed above.

All tend to take Columbus, who was notoriously mendacious, at his word, accepting his self-created legend.... All these authors assume the veracity and authenticity of sources of doubtful authorship and unreliable date. All miss important documents and, therefore, key events.

Both Ms. Delaney's "Columbus and the Quest for Jerusalem" and Mr. Bergreen's "Columbus: The Four Voyages" seem indifferent to coherent narrative or rational chronology. Ms. Delaney makes the Great Famine of 1315 strike "just as" trades inaugurated by the Infante Dom Henrique "were flourishing." In a chapter, so garbled as to be nonsensical, on a rebellion that started on Hispaniola in 1497, Mr. Bergreen kills off the same character (a troublemaker named Adrián de Mujica) by different methods at an interval of 10 pages and six months. At one point he even confuses Columbus with his brother. All the authors under review make many howlers, but in this respect, Mr. Bergreen is way ahead, managing a rate of one every nine or 10 pages.

Ms. Delaney's argument that Columbus was some kind of Christian crusader—if one can dignify her random assertions with that word—relies on the traditional chronology of Columbus's writings to suggest, among other things, the importance of his early references to Jerusalem. But she never realizes where the chronology is leading her wrong.

To some extent, scholars may have encouraged these amateurs' imprudence by publishing English translations of many of the sources. Translated sources attract errors just as translated scriptures foment heresies....

None of these writers has understood the historical context that makes the events of the 1490s intelligible.... Because they have not read crucial work in Spanish, Mr. Bergreen and Ms. Delaney misrepresent Columbus's motive—which was social ambition, inspired in part by his self-modeling on fictional heroes.... They also fail to grasp the importance of how private enterprise, rather than royal patronage, financed his voyages.

Ms. Delaney ... ignores the messianic traditions and longstanding Jerusalem obsessions of the Aragonese court—which would provide her with a better explanation than her own for Columbus's references to Jerusalem. ... Ms. Delaney is simply mistaken in her basic assumptions: The Middle Ages were no "age of faith" but were full of secular values as well as religious ones. There is no evidence that Columbus was particularly religious until—like so many people—he turned to God following the failure of his worldly ambitions.

(Arguably, his criticism of Delaney's comment about the Great Famine of 1315 may be based on a misreading of what the phrase "this trade and innovation" on p. 14 of her book refers to—whether to the content of the preceding paragraph alone, as he interprets it, or to the content of the several preceding paragraphs, which was probably the intended reference, though it could have been phrased less ambiguously.)

Of course, while one may take issue with some points as Fernández-Armesto does, that does not to this reader--not a trained historian--vitiating a complete work. For example, "social ambition and self-modeling inspired by fictional heroes" can exist side by side with religious passion, just as an age full of secular as well as religious values can in fact be an “age of faith.” The fact that Columbus “turned to God following the failure of his worldly ambitions” does not mean that he was not religious before, for which Delno West in his introduction to the Libro de profecías has reportedly found evidence which presumably the reviewer has rejected.

As the reviewer said in the introduction to his own book quoted above, “...it would no doubt be possible to reconstruct the image [of Columbus], from the same evidence, in other ways” than he himself has done. Just so.

3. Columbus as Hero or Not?

While there has been some decline in anti-Columbus biographies of the kind that appeared around the time of the 1992 Quincentenary, the anti-Columbus propaganda of that time was very influential in helping to shape the public image of Columbus today, in a culture that celebrates victimhood and oppression, and which delights in tearing down past heroes, both literally and figuratively. Such heroes were honored not only for what they accomplished--that is, their actions and consequences of them--but for the admirable reasons for which they did them. It is usually for that combination of intention and action and consequences that we honor them.

The brief discussion several pages earlier about making inferences may be roughly summarized by the two chains in the box below. The “possible inference chain” reverses the direction of the “causal influence chain.”

As noted earlier, some modern critics focus mainly on consequences of Columbus’s actions, and perhaps on the actions themselves (where the historical record allows them to be ascertained) and perhaps then, if interested at all, reason backwards to infer the intentions that are assumed to have led to those actions. One major pitfall in such reasoning is that it can ignore the essential truth, often overlooked, that good actions can have bad consequences--due to bad decisions, bad luck, or extraneous events. (For similar reasons bad actions can possibly have good consequences.)

So, one can ask: if some of Columbus’s actions had bad consequences, does that mean they resulted from bad intentions?

Questions of good or evil in a moral sense focus in particular on intentions, and to better understand those we must look further backwards in the causal influence chain to the milieu, one's personal history as shaped in part by it, and the motivations that these have contributed to, which helped frame the intentions.

One can argue that those whom society condemns are those with evil intentions expressed in evil actions, while we honor as heroes those with good intentions expressed in good actions that generally lead--or led--to good consequences (which is what attracts our attention to them in the first place). Hence the importance of examining the causal influences—milieu, personal history, and motivations—in attempting to better understand a person's intentions and form an honest judgment. That is the particular importance of such books as the last two described above—by Fernández-Armesto and by Delaney in informing moral judgments, though they draw different conclusions.

Columbus has been a hero for many years, precisely because his intentions, actions, and many of their consequences were found worthy of admiration, even though others turned out to be deplorable. At the time of the 2012 centennial of the 1912 unveiling of the Columbus memorial in Washington, there were an astonishing 590 monuments to Columbus around the world! A number were erected at the time of the 1992 Quincentenary, but at least 49 had been emplaced since 1992. (For an up-to-date report with photos of most of the monuments, see the fascinating Columbus monuments web site, columbus.vanderkrogt.net, on which our report was based.)

People build monuments to whom and what they honor. Clearly, there are a great many people in this country and abroad who honor the name, memory, intentions, and positive accomplishments of the Discoverer, and the higher values that motivated and sustained him in his efforts and his trials.

But today his heroic stature is diminished because there has been a greater focus on some of the bad consequence of his actions (while downplaying or in some cases denying the good consequences). Many, it appears, have imputed evil intentions to him because of their own ignorance of the milieu in which he existed and its effects on his own personal history, motivations, and intentions. But with an increasingly better knowledge and understanding of those matters, we can hope that prejudices might be set aside in favor of the truth.

There will always be different interpretations of history and of the lives of notables. It is unfortunate in the case of Columbus, however, that those with a negative slant seem to have been better publicized than those with a more positive view. What those who honor his memory should fear is distortions based on ignorance of his milieu and motivations, forced interpretations, and political slants and pleading, rather than sound scholarship, reasonable inferences and interpretations based on the historical truth—which we should never fear. But the results of such scholarship certainly need to be better publicized against the negative propaganda.

--Edward M. Sullivan

The Honor America Corps was established in 2003 to provide a cadre of Knights willing to visit area parochial schools and school districts of Central Virginia as well as participate in civic and fraternal events to offer a clearer understanding of the meaning of our flag. (While its core membership comes from the Rappahannock Fourth Degree Assembly, it is open to all Knights who are willing and able to participate in its activities.)

Audiences have ranged in size from over 6,000 at a minor league baseball game to 8 at a National Cemetery ceremony.

Additional information about the program can be found at www.honoramericacorps.org.

THE ABRUZZO AND MOLISE HERITAGE SOCIETY of the Washington, DC Area
Celebrating Italian Culture & Community since 2000

Proud Sponsor of the National Columbus Day Ceremony
October 8, 2018

The National Christopher Columbus Association

Board of Directors

James P. McCusker, President
Peter R. Davio, Vice President
Steven J. Upton, Secretary
Henry Rackowski, Jr., Treasurer
Thomas J. Hogan, Past President
Edward M. Sullivan (Honorary)
Patrick Korten

Francesco Isgro
Peter A. Gabauer, Jr.
Peter D. Gervais
Tommy C. Harger
Martha V. Hilton

Gabriella Mileti
Joseph Feakes
Maria D'Andrea-Yothers
Christopher Pierno
Steve Kehoe

Honorary Members

ORGANIZATIONS

Archdiocese of Washington
The United States Army Band
"Pershing's Own"
The United States Marine Band
"The President's Own"

INDIVIDUALS

Rev. Daniel P. Coughlin
Blanche L. Curfman
Rafael Jover Y De Mora Figueroa
Dorla Dean Elton Kemper, HPG-NSDAR
James P. Kiernan, Ph.D., OAS
Marguerite C. Moore
Lloyd J. Ogilvie, D.D.
Jose L. Restepo. LL.D., OAS
Msgr. Roger C. Roensch
Ana Maria Snell, Ph.D.
Mrs. Presley Merritt Wagoner, HPG-NSDAR
Linda Tinker Watkins, HPG-NSDAR

2017 One-Year Membership for Last Year's Essay Contest Winners:

Rachel Elizabeth Grace, 1st Place Winner
Ian Christopher McKnight, 2nd Place Winner
Molly Martin, 3rd Place Winner

Special Recognitions

FOUNDING CHAIRMAN EMERITUS, 1995

John C. Moore, PSD, K of C

DISTINGUISHED OFFICER MEDAL, 1996:

Edward M. Sullivan, Ph.D., PSD, K of C

DISTINGUISHED MEMBER MEDAL, 1999:

Gustav S. Weber, PSD, K of C

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL, 1999:

Alfred M. Rotondaro, Ph.D.

COUNSELOR EMERITUS MEDAL, 2005

Richard J. Higgins, Esq.

Organizational Members

GENERAL

CACI

National Council for the Promotion of the Italian Language in American Schools

National Italian-American Foundation

National Society Daughters of the American Revolution

District of Columbia State Society, D.A.R.

Virginia State Society, DAR

Lido Civic Club of Washington, D.C.

Holy Rosary Church (Italian Parish)

Order Sons of Italy in America

Roma Lodge No. 71, O.S.D.I.A.

George Washington Lodge No. 2038, O.S.D.I.A.

International Lodge 2522, O.S.D.I.A.

Abruzzo and Molise Heritage Society of the Washington D.C. Area

Italic Institute of America

Margaret Whetten Chapter, DAR

Casa Italiana Socioculture Center

National Society Children of the American Colonists

Virginia Society Children of the American Revolution

The Columbus Day Committee of Atlantic City & The Bonnie Blue Foundation

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Supreme Council

District of Columbia State Council

Maryland State Council

Virginia State Council

Harry J. Canter Insurance Agency

Robert Callaway Insurance Agency

Washington Council # 224, DC

Potomac Council # 433, DC

St. Mary's Council #1470, MD
 George Brent Council # 5332, VA
 Fr. Francis J. Diamond Council # 6292, VA
 Columbiettes of Fr. Diamond Council # 6292, VA
 Fr. Horace B. McKenna Council # 11024, MD
 Fort Belvoir Council # 11170, VA
 Cardinal Patrick O'Boyle Council # 11302, DC
 Fr. Michael C. Kidd Council #14455, MD
 Bishop McNamara Chapter of Grand Knights, MD

FOURTH DEGREE

Calvert Province 4th Degree
 Maryland District 4th Degree
 Archdiocese of Washington District 4th Degree
 Washington Assembly # 151, DC
 Fr. Andrew White Assembly # 377, MD
 Father O'Keefe Assembly # 1162, VA
 St. Elizabeth Bayley Seton Assembly # 1781, VA
 Commodore Barry Assembly # 1163, VA
 Richmond Assembly # 1165, VA
 Bishop J. Louis Flaherty Assembly #1678
 Fr. Walter F. Malloy Assembly # 1894, VA
 Msgr. McMahon Assembly # 2205, VA
 Holy Trinity Assembly #2520
 Cardinal Hickey Prince of the Church Assembly # 2534, DC
 Colonel Anthony F. Naples U.S.A. Assembly # 3245

INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS

Isaias "Cy" Alba, PSD, MFD, K of C
 Richard S. Aleksy, PSD, FM, K of C
 Domenic Allegra
 Stephen Ansari
 Nina Baccanari
 Catherine Ball
 Blaine M. Barham
 Nick Benedis
 Stephen Burnley
 Frank Carissimo
 Dino J. Caterini
 Anthony Corbo
 Marian Crane
 David L. Crum
 Lucio A. D'Andrea

Maria D'Andrea-Yothers
 Peter R. Davio, PSD, K of C
 Audreenia DeFranks
 Carmen DeFranks, Sr.
 Nancy DeSanti
 John Andrew Dorsey IV
 Tony Durso
 Thomas C. Etter, Esq.
 Joseph Feakes
 Peter A. Gabauer, Jr, PSD, K of C
 Gary Michael "Gus" Gallagher
 Danny Garcia
 Peter D. Gervais, PSD, K of C
 Jack Giacalone
 Louis Giacchino

Drew Gorman
Maria Castelli Guzauskas
E. Linda Guidotti
Tommy C. Harger, PSD, K of C
Richard Head, PSD, VSM, K of C
Gerald Hicks
Martha V. Hilton
Stephen Holowenzak
Florence S Hogan
Thomas J. Hogan, PSD, K of C
Thomas Iacoboni
Francesco Isgro
Rose James
David Jepson
Stephen Kehoe
Brenda Baker Lee
Capt. J. Philip London, PhD, USN, Ret.
Roger Loy
Jay Madigan
Rebekah Marks
Edward Mays
J. P. McCusker, PSD, FM, K of C
Claude Mertenzenich
Janet McFarland
Gabriella Mileti
Raphael Ortiz
Kenneth Osik
Marilou Padama
Steven Payne
Christopher Pierno
Christopher Powers
Craig Pryor
Richard Quintanna

Henry Rackowski, Jr
Julia Rogers
Robert Roth
Mary Lu Saavedra
Estella Salvatierra
Anthony Salvemini
Joseph Scafetta, Jr., Esq.
Louis J. Scalfari
Charles H. Smallwood, FM, K of C
Lawrence Sosnowich, PSD, K of C
Carlos Sousa
Deanna Sporleder
Daniel Spuller
Dr. Daniel L. Stabile
Dr. Duke Nordinger Stern
Joe Stewart
Edward M. Sullivan, Ph.D., PSD, K of C
Phil Tabbita
Michael Thumm
Maureen Tipton
Paul Trautman
Anthony R. Tringale, C.L.U.
John Trocciola
Dale W Trott
Steven J. Upton
Peter J. Weimann
Lloyce Ann West
Debbie Wheeler
John Winfrey, FM, K of C
Mark F. Woznak
Paul Zimmerman
Peter Zaudtke, Sr.

*Your Emblem of Strength in 2018
Same protection for your family since 1882*

HARRY J. CANTER, MBA, FICF

4353 Northview Drive
Bowie, MD 20716
301-262-4300

harry.canter@kofc.org

www.kofccanteragency.com

ROBERT J. CALLAWAY, FICF, LUTCF, MDR

3919 National Drive #301
Burtonsville, MD 20866
301-421-1430

robert.callaway@kofc.org

www.callawayagency.com

The Robert J. Callaway and Harry J. Canter Agencies of the Knights of Columbus and our Field Agents wish to congratulate the NCCA on this year's annual Columbus Day Celebration!

Thank you for your continued support of Knights of Columbus Insurance.
Servicing families in the Archdiocese of Washington and Northern Virginia.

We join the NCCA in honoring Christopher Columbus, the great Italian navigator

For more than 100 years, Holy Rosary Church and later Casa Italiana Socio-cultural Center, have been welcoming Italians and Italian Americans to our Nation's Capital. As the Capitol Crossing project develops the entire area surrounding our "Little Italy," we are expanding and building again for the next century.

With the larger footprint, Casa Italiana will house a museum focused on the contributions of Italian Americans in the Washington, DC area and an Italian-American library, among other projects. Join us as we build our legacy for the next century.

HOLY ROSARY CHURCH

CASA ITALIANA LANGUAGE SCHOOL

Maryland State Council Knights of Columbus

Best Wishes for a Successful
2018 Columbus Day Celebration

Rev. Joseph Jenkins
State Chaplain

Dale W. Trott and Linda
State Deputy

Vincent Grauso and Mary Jane
State Secretary

Christopher L. Powers and Annie
State Treasurer

Anthony N. Salvemini and Kathy
State Advocate

John F. Winfrey and Gloria
State Warden

Stephen M. Cohen and Vicki
Immediate Past State Deputy

Commodore John Barry Assembly 1163

Knights of Columbus

Arlington, VA

Celebrating Our Heritage as Citizens, Explorers, and Patriots 2018 – 2019

Officers

F. Navigator	John Knox
F. Friar	Fr. Mbinkar
F. Captain	Jeff Cuiper
F. Pilot	Thomas Galvin
Comptroller	Charles Sullivan
F. Purser	Michael Farrell
F. Scribe	Hien Nguyen
In Sentinel	Joseph Baker
Out Sentinel	Stephen White

F. 1 Year Trustee	John Tieso
F. 2 Year Trustee	Peter Bouffard
F. 3 Year Trustee	Hung Henry Cao
Color Corps Cdr	Hung Henry Cao
F. Admiral	Kelly Niernberger

JAMES CARDINAL HICKEY ASSEMBLY #2534
KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS – FOURTH DEGREE
WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

HICKEY ASSEMBLY OFFERS PRAYERS AND BEST WISHES TO
THE NATIONAL CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS ASSOCIATION
ON THE OCCASION OF THE ANNUAL COLUMBUS DAY CELEBRATION

Faithful Friar	SK Rev. Conrad Murphy, FDD, PGK
Faithful Navigator	SK Col. Jerome Driscoll, USMC-Ret, StW, FDD, PGK
Faithful Captain	SK Hon. Peter A. Gabauer, Jr, PSD, FDD, PGK
Faithful Admiral	SK Timothy Saccoccia, PSD, FDD, PGK, PFN
Faithful Pilot	SK Col. M. Fred Armstrong, USAF-Ret, DD, PGK
Faithful Scribe	SK Nicholas Shields, FDD, PGK
Faithful Purser	SK Jonathan T. Sitko, PGK
Faithful Comptroller	SK Christopher Pierno, StT, FDD, PGK
Faithful Inner Sentinel	SK Cpt. Luis Avila, USA
Faithful Outer Sentinel	SK Nicholas Procino
Faithful Trustee	SK William C. Henry
Faithful Trustee	SK Patrick A Fricchione
Faithful Trustee	SK Victor N. David
Color Corps Commander	SK Timothy Saccoccia, PSD, FDD, PGK, PFN
Vice CCC	SK RADM Garry Hall, USN-Ret

HICKEY ASSEMBLY IS THE PROUD HOME OF:

SK HIS EMINENCE DONALD CARDINAL WUERL, STD, ARCHBISHOP OF WASHINGTON
SUPREME KNIGHT CARL A. ANDERSON, GCSS, KSG, KGCHS, PSD, FDD, PGK
DEPUTY SUPREME KNIGHT CPT PATRICK E. KELLY, USNR-RET, PSD, FDD, PGK
FORMER SUPREME WARDEN GEORGE W. HANNA, PSD, FDD, FM, PGK, PFN
STATE DEPUTY OTTO E. HECK, KHS, FDD, PGK, PFN
STATE SECRETARY BRANDON J. BROWN, KM, FDD, PGK
STATE TREASURER CHRISTOPHER PIERNO, FDD, PGK
STATE ADVOCATE LE N. NGUYEN, FDD, PGK, PFN
STATE WARDEN COL. JEROME DRISCOLL, USMC-RET, FDD, PGK
DISTRICT DEPUTY #1 COL. M. FRED ARMSTRONG, USAF-RET, DD, GK
DISTRICT DEPUTY #5 SK MICHAEL VIVIANO, DD, PGK
DISTRICT DEPUTY #6 SK CHRISTIAAN VAN NISPEN, DD, PGK
ASSISTANT TO THE SUPREME KNIGHT FOR MILITARY AND VETERANS AFFAIRS
SK COL. CHARLES GALLINA, USMC-RET., KHS, PSD, FVSM, FDD, PGK-C, PFN-C
PAST STATE DEPUTY TIMOTHY SACCOC CIA, PSD, FDD, PGK, PFN
PAST STATE DEPUTY PETER D. GERVAIS, PSD, FDD, PGK
PAST STATE DEPUTY ANTHONY I. COLBERT, PSD, FDD, PGK, PFN
PAST STATE DEPUTY PETER A. GABAUER, JR., PSD, FDD, PGK

VISIT US ONLINE AT HICKEY.DCKNIGHTS.ORG

Virginia State Council Knights of Columbus

HONORING THE MEMORY OF CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

Edward R. Polich
State Deputy

Most Reverend Paul S. Loverde
State Chaplain

Monsignor John C. Cregan
Associate State Chaplain

Rev. John A. Abe
Associate State Chaplain

Robert Szerszynski
State Secretary

Brian M. Ripple
State Treasurer

Mark Janda
State Advocate

Pat Rowland
State Warden

Stephen J. Kehoe
Immediate Past State Deputy

Tommy C. Harger
Supreme Director

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

District of Columbia State Council

EST. 1899

Congratulations to the National Christopher Columbus Association
on the occasion of the Annual Columbus Day Celebration

State Deputy
State Chaplain
State Secretary
State Treasurer
State Advocate
State Warden
Immediate Past State Deputy

Otto E. Heck, KHS, FDD, PGK, PFN
Rev. Col. Gary R. Studniewski, USA (Ret.), KHS
Brandon J. Brown, KM, FDD, PGK
Christopher Pierno, FDD, PGK
Le N. Nguyen, FDD, PGK, PFN
Col. Jerome E. Driscoll, USMC (Ret.), FDD, PGK, FN
Amado C. Alvarez, Jr., IPSD, FDD, PGK, PFN

District Deputy #1
District Deputy #2
District Deputy #3
District Deputy #4
District Deputy #5
District Deputy #6

Col. M. Fred "Jazz" Armstrong, USAF (Ret.), PGK
Kenneth A. "Kenny" Brown, PGK
Alexander Unanka, PGK
James P. Strahota, PGK
Michael Viviano, PGK
Christiaan A. van Nispen, PGK

State Membership Director
State Program Director
State Executive Secretary

Nicholas Shields, FDD, PGK
Joshua Bryant, FDD, PGK
Timothy M. SACCOCCIA, PSD, FDD, PGK, PFN

Home Jurisdiction of Supreme Knight Carl A. Anderson and
Deputy Supreme Knight Patrick E. Kelly

Become a Knight today: DCKnights.org

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Father Francis J. Diamond
Council #6292
Fairfax, Virginia

Dan O'Malley, Grand Knight
Gib Flodine, Deputy Grand Knight
David Todd, Sr., Financial Secretary
Kevin Kleponis, Recorder
Pat Murray, Advocate
John Johnson, Outside Guard
Charlie Kraiger, Inside Guard
Keith Morrison, 2yr Trustee

Rev. Christopher Tipton, Chaplain
Mark Walther, Chancellor
Tom Gross, Treasurer
Ed Cuccias, Lecturer
Pat McGuire, Warden
Nate Rasmussen, Outside Guard
Joe Gesker, 3yr Trustee
Herb Zimmerman, 1yr Trustee

The Knights of Father Diamond Council
Offer Best Wishes for a Successful
Columbus Day Celebration.

Special Thanks to the National Park Service for Their Cooperation in Organizing this Event.

No one should fear to undertake any task in the name of our Savior, if it is just and if the intention is purely for His holy service.

~ Christopher Columbus

HOP-ON HOP-OFF SIGHTSEEING TOURS

DISCOVER WASHINGTON, DC

Authorized
Concessioner

We are proud to be an authorized concessioner of the National Park Service and the National Mall and Memorial Parks.

DELUXE TOUR INCLUDES:

MADAME
TUSSAUDS AND
FREE NIGHT TOUR

Hop on our double-decker bus with fantastic and uninterrupted views to explore the City at your leisure. With over 45 stops and your choice of live or multi-language recorded commentary, this is the best way to see the Nation's Capital.

BUY YOUR TICKETS NOW
BIGBUSTOURS.COM

BIG BUS
· WASHINGTON DC ·

Washington Council #224

Est. 1897

The Officers of Washington's Oldest Knights of Columbus Council

Grand Knight	James Strahota
Deputy Grand Knight	Steven B Mudd
Financial Secretary	Jason Dombrowski
Treasurer	Drew Gorman
Recorder	Nicholas Mudd
Trustee	Henry Rackowski
Trustee	George Sitgraves
Trustee	Ted Strab
Advocate	Luke Holian
Warden	Wilson Duarte
Chancellor	Brian Matt
Inside Guard	Capt. Luis Avila
Outside Guard	Alexander Ascencio

proudly salute the

National Christopher Columbus Association

AD MAIOREM DEI GLORIAM

Fr. Horace B. McKenna, S.J. Council #11024
Mother Seton Parish - Germantown, MD

• Chaplain:	Fr. Lee Fangmeyer.	Treasurer:	Jim Black
Associate Chaplain:	Fr. Lou Faust	Advocate:	Art Padama, PGK
Associate Chaplain:	Dn. Frank Bendel	Inside Guard:	Warren Pfister, PGK
Grand Knight:	Dante Preciado, PGK	Inside Guard:	Rosario D'Costa
Deputy Grand Knight:	Chris Dominic	Outside Guard:	Oscar D'Shen
Chancellor:	Jerome Faison	Lecturer:	Doug Pool
Warden:	Jim Parker	3-Year Trustee:	Gustavo Tode, PGK
Financial Secretary:	Leo McDonald, PGK	2-Year Trustee:	Jim Novitzki, PGK
Recorder:	Lawrence Thomas	1-Year Trustee:	Bob Bokma, PGK

WASHINGTON ASSEMBLY NO. 151
OLDEST ASSEMBLY IN THE ARCHDIOCESE
Established April 1, 1912

“The Visible Arm of the Knights of Columbus is the Color Corps . . .”

WE ARE PROUD OF OUR ACCOMPLISHMENTS!

GREETINGS AND BEST WISHES ARE EXTENDED TO ALL
AS WE CELEBRATE CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS DAY!

FAITHFUL FRIAR REV.
FAITHFUL NAVIGATOR
FAITHFUL CAPTAIN
FAITHFUL ADMIRAL
FAITHFUL COMPTROLLER
FAITHFUL PURSER
FAITHFUL SCRIBE
FAITHFUL INNER SENTINEL
FAITHFUL OUTER SENTINEL
FAITHFUL TRUSTEE (3 YR)
FAITHFUL TRUSTEE (2 YR)
FAITHFUL TRUSTEE (1 YR)
COLOR CORPS COMMANDER
VICE COMMANDER
VICE COMMANDER

BRIAN S. SANDERFOOT,
THOMAS L. JONES, FS, PGK,
KEITH J. GREEN, PGK, FDW
CHARLES M. COLEMAN, JR., PFN, PGK
JAMES M. TOLIVER, PSD
JAMES E. OXFORD, JR., PGK, PFN
PATRICK K. ABBOTT, FS, PGK
FRED D. RICE
LENSOR E. JONES
DAVID I. MERRIWETHER, PFN, PGK
WILLIAM C. SMITH, PGK
AMADO C. ALVAREZ, JR., PFN, FDD, PGK
JAMES E. OXFORD, PGK, PFN
VENANTIUS O. ONUNAKU, PGK, PFN
KEITH JUSTIN GREEN, PGK, FDW

*“Alone we can do so little;
together we can do so much.”*

Maryland DAR Joins the
National Christopher Columbus Association
on the anniversary of the Christopher Columbus statue
at Union Station

District of Columbia Daughters

*Join in honoring the memory of
Christopher Columbus*

Marcia Castelli Suzauskas

State Regent, DCDAR

Martha O. Kilton

President General's Representative to the NCCA

Sullivan Brothers
Assembly #2861
Rockville, MD

"We stick together"
Motto of the Five Sullivan Brothers

Best Wishes for a Great Columbus Day Celebration

Fr. Jim Boccabella
SK Edward Day, PGK
SK George Silvas
SK Kevin Kittka
SK John Durbin, PFN
SK Roger Lie, PFN
SK Joseph Feakes

Faithful Friar
Faithful Navigator
Faithful Captain
Faithful Pilot
Faithful Comptroller
Faithful Admiral
Color Corps Commander

POTOMAC ASSEMBLY 2204 – ALEXANDRIA, VA
HONORING CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS
NATIONAL COLUMBUS DAY CELEBRATION

National Society Children of the American Colonists

Virginia Matsumoto, 2018-2019 National President
Marjorie Shelton, 2017-2019 President General

Membership is open for any child, male or female, of good moral character under the age of 22. An applicant must furnish proof of his/her lineal descent through legal and lawful marriages for an ancestor who rendered civil or military service to any of the Colonies prior to July 4, 1776.

Please visit our website at www.nsdac.org/nscac to learn more about our organization and membership criteria. Several states have their own societies and local activities. Please help us grow as we celebrate 80 years in 2019!

Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus Cardinal Patrick A. O'Boyle Assembly 386 Silver Spring, Maryland

"The Tradition Continues – Patriotically Serving God and Country"

Faithful Friar – Rev. Ryan Pineda
Faithful Navigator – Russell E. Sutton, Jr., PGK
Faithful Captain – Charles Hayes, FDD, PGK
Faithful Pilot – Isidore C. Sobgo
Faithful Admiral – Tom Devlin, III, PFN
Faithful Comptroller – Francis Moran
Faithful Purser – Jude O. Onwumelu PFN
Faithful Scribe – Yen V. Le FDD, PGK, PFN
Color Corps Commander – SK John A. Fox, FDD, PGK, PFN
Vice Commander – SK Yen V. Le, FDD, PGK, PFN
Faithful Trustee (3 year) – Stephen P. Holowenzak, PhD/PE, PGK, PFN
Faithful Trustee (2 year) – Marvin J. Schuttloffel FDW, PFN
Faithful Trustee (1 year) – Neil Dorian, PGK, PFN
Faithful Inner Sentinel – Mark Borlasia
Faithful Inner Sentinel – Charles Pittsburg Roe
Faithful Outer Sentinel – Evaristus S. Ojaku

Congratulations

To the

National Christopher Columbus Association

On the

106th anniversary of the magnificent Columbus Statue at Union Station in Washington, DC

SK Micheal W. Thumm and his staff
Archdiocese of Washington District
Knights of Columbus

st John Neumann Assembly #1763

Bowie, Maryland

Celebrates Columbus Day
2018

*The Officers and Members of
Fr. Walter F. Malloy Assembly, #1894
celebrate the Admiral of the Sea,
Christopher Columbus*

Congratulations and success to the National Christopher Columbus Association (NCCA) for a magnificent celebration on October 8, 2018 at the Grand Statue of Christopher Columbus at the Union Station, Washington D. C. The 2018 Officers and members of the Roma Lodge #71, OSIA join other NCCA organizations in honoring the Great Discoverer, Christopher Columbus.

Order Sons and Daughters of Italy in America®

President, Nina Baccanari

*Vice President
Past President
Orator
Recording Secretary
Financial Secretary
Treasurer
Chaplain
Trustee
Trustee
Trustee
Trustee
Mistress of Ceremony
Mistress of Ceremony
Sergeant-at-Arms
Arbitration Commissioner*

*Alfio Arcidiacono
Arthur Baccanari (Deceased)
Fred Caponiti
Catherine Fisher
Cathy Battistone
Joseph Sparacino
Jeanette Caruso
Pat Pulvirenti
Stella Pulvirenti
Nancy DeLuca
Kathleen Caponiti
Judy Arcidiacono
Jeanette Caruso
Catherine Poslosky
Carmela Cicala Arcidiacono
Vernon Behanna*

This Year's Program Cover Art

Located near the generally accepted birth place of Christopher Columbus in Genoa, on Piazza Acquaverde stands a tribute to The Admiral, created by the Italian sculpture Lorenzo Bartolini and dedicated in 1862.

The monument contains a statue of Columbus with long, flowing hair, dressed in a short Spanish tabard, and a large open cloak; his left hand rests on an anchor while his right is on the shoulder of a figure of America typified by a kneeling Indian maiden holding a cross in the right hand.

At each of the four corners of the base, stands a smaller square pedestal, on each of which is a seated statue, representing Piety, Science, Constancy and Prudence. Between these are four bass-reliefs: representing Columbus before the Council of Salamanca (on the front); Columbus erecting a cross on the first land discovered,

The reception of Columbus at Barcelona, by the Kings of Spain on his return from the first voyage; and

Columbus in chains, returning to Spain.

Inscriptions on the pedestal read:

On the front - CRISTOFORO COLOMBO LA PATRIA - "To Christopher Columbus, the Fatherland,"

On the right - MDCCCLXII DEDICATO IL MONUMENTO - "This Monument was dedicated in 1862."

On the left - MDCCCXLVI POSTE LE FONDAMENTA - "Foundation laid in 1846,"

On the back: - DIVINATO UN MONDO LO AVVINSE DI PERENNI BENEFIZI ALL' ANTICO - "Having divined a world, he found it for the perennial benefit of the old one;"

National
COPILAS

The National Council for the Promotion of Italian Language in American Schools, Inc.

The National Council for the Promotion of the Italian Language in American Schools, Inc. Salutes the National Columbus Day Association for sponsoring the Annual Columbus Day Ceremony In Washington, DC

The National COPILAS assists communities around the United States in introducing or broadening the study of Italian language and culture in their public and private schools, colleges and universities (K-16) in collaboration with universities in Italy and other countries. The National COPILAS provides:

1. LEADERSHIP AND EXPERTISE serving on cross organizational Italian language and culture groups and working in close liaison with the Italian Embassy, and all Italian Consulates in the United States and international committees pertaining to the implementation, development and sustainability of Italian language and culture in American schools.
2. EDUCATIONAL and CULTURAL INSTITUTION ACTIVITIES through our website, print media as well as face to face meetings with state, district, county and local school and community officials, our educational experts work to ascertain needs in order to promote the introduction of Italian language programs in school systems and assist in the implementation of those programs.
3. DEVELOPMENT ACTIVITIES in designing curricula at the appropriate levels; identify and assist in recommending teaching materials for classroom instruction and library resources and assist in identifying highly qualified suitable instructors to staff Italian language programs.
4. ASSISTANCE WITH STRATEGY TO INCREASE ENROLLMENTS through working with state departments of education, school district officials and individual schools throughout the United States.
5. TEACHER DEVELOPMENT ACTIVITIES through collaboration with Italian American educational organizations such as American Association of Teachers of Italian (AATI), Italian American Committee on Education (IACE), The Calandra Italian American Institute, Italian Embassy Observatory and other organizations, colleges and universities in the United States and abroad to provide workshops in best practices in teaching Italian as a foreign language.
6. EDUCATIONAL SCHOLARSHIPS AND GRANTS TO TEACHERS AND STUDENTS for the study of Italian and assisting teachers to improve their teaching and language abilities.
7. FUND RAISING ACTIVITIES/NATIONAL GALA. National COPILAS holds an annual Gala in Washington, DC to honor educators and supporters of the Italian Language in order to raise funds to support implementation, development and sustainability of Italian language and culture programs in the United States.

For More information about the National COPILAS or about becoming a member, please contact us at:

Dr. Daniel L. Stabile, President

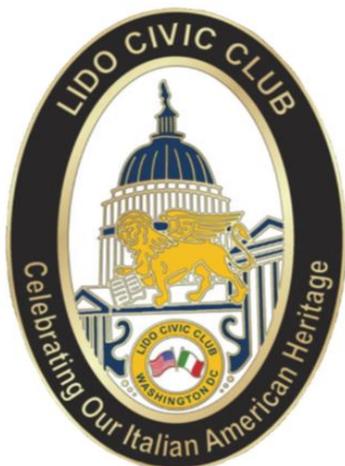

595 ½ Third Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20001 (703) 599-6942

www.national-copilas.org

The National Council for the Promotion of the Italian Language in American Schools, Inc. is an IRC 501(c)(3) Public Charity.

All contributions are tax deductible to the extent allowed by law.

The Lido Civic Club of Washington, D.C.
Is a Proud Sponsor of the October 8, 2018 National Columbus Celebration
Sponsored by the
National Christopher Columbus Association

The Lido Civic Club of Washington, D.C. is Metropolitan Washington's Premiere Italian American Business and Professional Organization Serving the Italian-American Community since 1929.

President, Thomas F. Regnante
Vice President, Vincenzo Fragomeni
Secretary, Vincenzo Fragomeni
Treasurer, Arthur Del Buono
Public Affairs, Mark Letenzi
Sergeant-at-Arms, William Bonacki

www.LidoCivicClub.com

Italian Americans have a proud history as contributors to our society from America's earliest days.

Christopher Columbus's accomplishments as an explorer are at the heart of the American dream. Against great odds, turbulent seas, limited technology, and popular misconceptions about the world he ventured out into, he discovered the Americas five centuries ago.

His courage, perseverance and vision are the same values that inspired our immigrant forbearers as they made their own perilous journeys to America, and we are proud to support the National Christopher Columbus Association.

The Amb. Peter F. Secchia Building
1860 19th St. NW
Washington, D.C. 20009
NIAF.org